

May 15, 2008

Dario building wins third award for Fort Wayne production facility

Dario Designs of Marlborough, Mass., has won a third award for the design of the Fort Wayne Newspapers production facility in Indiana. The Excellence in Construction award was given by the Building Contractors Association to recognize it as the most outstanding construction projects within a 75-mile radius of Fort Wayne.

Dario had previously received the Hard Hat Award from the Fort Wayne Downtown Improvement District for investing in a project that improves downtown Fort Wayne, as well as the 2007 ARCHIE award for Outstanding New Construction in a Historic District from ARCH Inc., Fort Wayne's historic preservation organization.

The award-winning $35 million plant is modeled on Fort Wayne's 19th-century train station, and features a railroad trestle bridge that joins the plant with Ft Wayne Newspapers' existing plant across the street. The new facility, which houses a TKS Color Top press, has been in operation since last fall, printing the afternoon News-Sentinel and morning Journal-Gazette.

It's the third award the facility, which opened for business last year, has received. Earlier, it captured a Hard Hat award from the Fort Wayne Downtown Improvement District and an Archie Award for outstanding new construction in a historic district.

