New production and office facility

This 85,000 square foot facility's design seeks to represent the region's qualities, express the buildings' functions and reflect the client's unique character. The headquarters borrow window shapes from all the towns it serves - their newspapers being a window to those communities.

The narrow site required a design for a building over 500 feet long and was designed to express the business' various functions in a way that mirrors the downtown facades.
