Dear Dario:

As we near completion of the William F. Lucey, Jr. Production Center, I would like to take this opportunity to thank you for a job well done. The whole community is talking about our "new building" and everyone at The Eagle-Tribune is proud to be a part of this exciting step into the future. We have always been at the industry's technological forefront, and newspapers across the country look to us when they are determining their own paths.

We will be celebrating the dedication of the William F. Lucey, Jr. Production Center by printing a special section entitled, "Building for the Future". The section will focus on the changing needs of our advertisers and readers and how the new technology makes The Eagle-Tribune a much-improved newspaper.

Shortly, you will be hearing from an Eagle-Tribune Advertising Representative. I hope that you will consider being a sponsor of this exciting project. It will be distributed to over 180,000 readers as well as to newspapers across the country that want to learn more about this new technology.

Once again, thank you for a job well done.

I have enclosed a book that should give you a sense of why this project was special in many ways.

Sincerely,

Irving E. Rogers, III
